A Child's Garden of Dreams

David Maslanka (1943-2017)

- I. There is a desert on the moon where the dreamer sinks so deeply into the ground that she reaches hell.
- II. A drunken woman falls into the water and comes out renewed and sober.
- III. A horde of small animals frightens the dreamer. The animals increase to a tremendous size, and one of them devours the little girl.
- IV. A drop of water is seen as it appears when looked at through a microscope. The girl sees that the drop is full of tree branches. This portrays the origin of the world.
- V. An ascent into heaven where pagan dances are being celebrated; and a descent into hell where angels are doing good deeds.

PROGRAM NOTES

Compiled and edited by Josh Rauw and Ben Vanderkruk

WildHeart, Katahj Copley

Katahj Copley is a Georgia native and graduate from University of West Georgia, where he received his Bachelor's degree in Music Education and Composition. His repertory includes over sixty compositions. Aside from composing, Copley is an enthusiastic educator who teaches young musicians the joy of discovering music. This passion is at the core of WildHeart. WildHeart is an experience of fast and exciting colors, interwoven with a soft lyrical interlude that soothes the heart in the middle of an exuberant thrill ride. This piece centers on the idea of someone with a free spirit, willing to look for the next adventure, and is an ode to the feeling of discovery.

Prelude and Fugue in G Minor, Johann Sebastian Bach/trans. Moehlmann

Johann Sebastian Bach is one of the most well-known composers in music history, and his life span is considered to be the start and end of the Baroque period. He wrote both sacred and secular music and was an accomplished performer of the organ, harpsichord, viola, and violin. The Prelude and Fugue in G Minor is a transcription for band by Roland L. Moehlmann of Prelude and Fugue No.6, BWV 558 from Eight Short Preludes and Fugues, a collection of works for keyboard and pedal originally attributed to J.S. Bach. Many elements of the Eight Short Preludes and Fugues, including rolling of large chords, octave doublings, repeated notes, patterns of movement of the fingers and feet, and overall texture are idiomatic on the pedal clavichord but make little sense on the organ. Still, the works came to be played on the organ in the 19th and 20th centuries, and were especially useful as teaching pieces for beginners. The works continue to be performed frequently in Christian churches because of their short length (about three minutes each) and ease of performance compared to other preludes and fugues attributed to J.S. Bach. In this setting, the full tonal resources of the modern concert band are on display. Moehlmann dedicated the Prelude and Fugue in G minor to Ms. Alice Inskeep, who was one of the original founding members of the influential National Association for Music Education.

Heart Songs, David Maslanka

David Maslanka was born in New Bedford, Massachusetts in 1943 and passed away in Missoula, Montana in 2017. He attended the Oberlin College Conservatory where he studied composition with Joseph Wood. He also spent a year at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, and did his masters and doctoral study in composition at Michigan State University, where his principal teacher was H. Owen Reed. Maslanka's music for winds has become especially well known and influential in the wind band community. Among his more than 150 works are over 50 pieces for wind ensemble, including eight symphonies, seventeen concertos, a Mass, and many concert pieces. His chamber music includes four wind quintets, five saxophone quartets, and many works for solo instrument and piano. In addition, he has written a variety of orchestral and choral pieces.

One of Maslanka's most heartfelt compositions for wind ensemble is Heart Songs, a multimovement work that takes melodies and themes from J.S. Bach's 371 Chorales and transforms them into a substantial and deeply-felt piece for the players and audience. The work features short solos by many members of the ensemble that work together to weave the seams of each movement and variation of melody into this masterwork for concert band. The title "Heart Songs" comes from the image of watering the tree of life with the blood of the heart.

Fantasia in G Major, Johann Sebastian Bach/trans. Goldman & Leist

The great G Major Fantasia for organ was composed between 1703 and 1707 during Bach's residence in Arnstadt. It was here, at the beginning of his career, that his music was found to be too full of "wonderful variations and foreign tones," and certainly the Fantasia is strikingly dissonant in its constant texture of suspensions. But the breadth of the five-part polyphonic writing and the richness of the harmonic sonority make the Fantasia one of the grandest of all Bach's compositions for organ. It is also one that lends itself most perfectly to the sound and sonorities of the modern wind band.

The transcription by Richard Franko Goldman and Robert L. Leist was undertaken as a memorial to Edwin Franko Goldman, who was the first bandmaster to include the works of Bach regularly in the band's concert repertoire, and who did so much to introduce the music of this great master to wider audiences. In this transcription, an attempt is made to recapture the sound of the Baroque organ through the medium of the modern band. The first performance was given by The Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting, on July 1, 1957.

A Child's Garden of Dreams, David Maslanka

A Child's Garden of Dreams is one of David Maslanka's most well-known and complex compositions. Commissioned by John and Marietta Paynter in 1981 and premiered by the Northwestern University Symphonic Wind Ensemble in 1982, the work now celebrates its 40th anniversary. Maslanka took inspiration for Child's Garden from psychiatrist Carl Jung's Man and His Symbols, where he describes a journal given to him by a fellow psychiatrist who had been gifted the journal by his ten-year-old daughter. The journal contained vivid descriptions of the child's dreams, which were comprised of some of the weirdest imagery he had ever encountered. Each dream began with "Once upon a time..." suggesting that the young girl viewed the dreams as fairy tales to tell her father; however, the father had no explanation for any context pertaining to the dreams and could see no personal connections to them.

A year after the journal had been given to the father, the young girl died of an infectious disease, leaving Carl Jung to interpret the dreams as a "preparation for death, expressed through short stories, like the tales told at primitive initiations. The little girl was approaching adolescence and at the same time, the end of her life. Little or nothing in the symbolism of her dreams points to the beginning of a normal adult life. When I first read her dream, I had the uncanny feeling that they suggested impending disaster." The images and subject of these dreams were not what one would expect to emerge from the mind of a child, but rather one of an elderly person reflecting on a long life lived. Maslanka chose five of the dreams to serve as subjects for each of the movements in A Child's Garden of Dreams, and motifs suggesting specific images and feelings brought on by the dreams can be heard throughout the piece. The collective narrative is reminiscent of the idea that "Life is a short dream," and the end of the dream is not final, but rather a new beginning.

We are grateful to the students of W.J. Mouat Secondary School for their contribution of artwork for tonight's performance!

W.J. Mouat Extended Day Art is a community of 37 grade 10-12 students who are exceptionally skilled and motivated artists. Throughout the year, they devote two 90-minute sessions each week to making art based on themes provided by their Art teacher, Susannah White. This group has grown in recent years as students are realizing the value of art practice in their daily lives. It also offers an inclusive and supportive artistic community where students can explore their identity and art styles.
